

Doctor

Wiretree

he was going to the doctor been trying to make some time didn't know what he's gonna find on the other side then he's left in her direction a force began to take his weary mind

So he pulled into the station and walked on off the train, A shade of Green began to fill the moon-lit sky he was taking his own time said the conductor looked like an old friend of mine

All the Sailors come and go, In this town on the east coast they leave a lot of lovers but they don't forget the the time they had My Father was one of them and my mother she worked just to keep him in she's in need of a new friend someone who would let her in and was going under pressure, but didn't know what she gonna find he was taken by her eyes and the north wind blowing down from the coastline

They found their pot of gold in their lover's broken soul digs all he can until the seeds come flying away he won't hurt her heart again until the gray-blue skies open and let him in
