Faith In Me, Faith In You

Doug Stone

A single mother with two children make lunches in the mornin'
And on her way to work, she drops 'em off at school
And tells them, Faith in me, faith in you
A farmer kneels in his fields with dust pourin' through his fingers
Says I'm gonna lose you if it don't rain real soon
He looks up and says, Faith in me, faith in youOh oh, I have to have faith that's where it all starts
I know I have to have faith in myself
It's feelin' that's found right here in my heart
And when I think about things and all the dreams
I wanna see come true let me tell you just what I do
I take a look in the mirror and I smile and say
Have faith in me, faith in youIn the shadow of the city, by the banks of the river
From the doorway of his cardboard room
A man cries out, Faith in me, faith in you
Your form of poverty and prejudice over hunger and pain
Over social injustice, just watch as the bosses rein
Here 'em saying, Faith in me, faith in youOh oh, I have to have faith that's where it all starts
I know I have to have faith in myself
It's feelin' that's found right here in my heart
And when I think about things and all the dreams
I wanna see come true let me tell you just what I do
I take a look in the mirror and I smile and say
Have faith in me, faith in youI take a look in the mirror and I smile and say
Have faith in me, faith in you
