

The Lines

Emerson Hart

When I was, oh, just nineteen
Fell in love, I didn't know what it means
To be good to someone else
To build a world bigger than myselfSo learned it, yeah, I learned it
And I'd do anything just to have that backWhen I was, oh, twenty-two
I had to burn everything I knew
It took me years to understand
Sacrifice makes a better manSo I've earned it, and I earned it
And I'd do anything just to have that back
But you can't go backIt was worth it
These are the lines that you're made of
It was certain
Time that was lost could be made up
If life hits you fast there's no take backs
But there's a grace in that
It was worth it
These are the lines that you're made ofWhen I was, oh, twenty-eight
Slowly turned into what I hated
Everything that I put first
Took what I loved and made it worseCouldn't take it, so I changed it
I'd seen enough to know when it's best to fight
When it's best to let it goIt was worth it
These are the lines that you're made of
It was certain
Time that was lost could be made up
But life hits you fast there's no take backs
But there's a grace in that
It was worth it
These are the lines that you're made of
These are the lines that you're made ofIt was worth it
These are the lines that you're made of
It was certain
Time that was lost could be made up
But life hits you fast there's no take backs
But there's a grace in that
It was worth it
These are the lines that you're made of
These are the lines that you're made of
