

Finding Something to Do

Hellogoodbye

I can see our fingers all intertwined, all your wrinkles perfectly suiting mine,
oh, somewhere down the line.

Probably, we'd run out of things to do,
holding on to what's left of our bleeding youth,
but, what else can you do?

Driving home tonight,
I didn't see the light,
I was just watchin' you sleep in shot gun.
I could of crashed the car.

I could tell our summer was just in bloom.
Open up the windows in the bedroom,
when you, woke me up at noon.

I was waiting for summer to turn in fall,
sick and tired of everything movin' in crawl,
oh, if it moved at all.

Driving home tonight,
I didn't see the lights,
I was just watchin' you sleep in shoot gun,
I could have crashed the car.

As long as there's something to see,
I'll see it with you.
As long as the days can seem,
I'll, find something to do, oh.
And if ever your love should leave,
Just swear you'll follow through,
and I swear I'll always follow you,

You have spent your better years bored with me,
Sat about waiting for eventually,
which, I can't wait to see.

As long as there's something to see,
I'll see it with you.

As long as the days can seem,
I'll find something to do, oh.
And if ever your love should leave,
Just swear you'll follow it through,
and I swear I'll always follow you.
I swear I'll always follow you.
