Sunrise On Mars

Threshold

doctor found me just in time can't recall how long i'd been lying there he said my body mind and soul had lost their true alignment i thought i'd only hurt my head the pain across my forehead reminded me its hard to tell you where it hurts but won't you make it go away so far away and he said smile pretend you're on a trip searching for yourself connecting with your soul close your eyes, your energy is gone w can be your strength we have got control we haven't got much time 'til sunrise on marsnever thought i'd fall from grace never thought i'd damage and never heal but everday i lose again, seduced by confusion i thought the world was black and white how can i escape from this colourfield it's hard to tell you why it hurts or how to make it go away
come everyone who hurts if you feel weighed down i will give you rest you should take my yoke upon your back learn from what i do my burden is less and i'll restore your soul for sunrise on marsnever thought i'd make it home
