

Suit of Lights

Alejandro Escovedo

Brought you diamonds. Brought you rain.
Brought you disappointment broken window panes.
Brought you silk. Brought you jade.
Bucket of blood in every note I played. Who am I when you look at me?
Sailor with no compass lost at sea?
Cowboy who can't ride anymore?
Dancer with no shoes, no floor, a baseball glove and matador? Who am I when you look at me
Through this prism of possibility?
I see you. Do you see me
In a suit of lights shining in the rain? Watched you shower.
Watched you bathe.
Put everything I have in every kiss we made.
Brought you silk.
Brought you jade.
A bucket of blood in every note I made. Who am I when you look at me?
Shadows? Dancing girls lost at sea?
A valentine who is waiting to be found?
Sentimental man? A sound?
A father? Lover? Sister? Brother? Who am I when you look at me
Through this prism of possibility? After you, you see me
In a suit of light shining in the rain
In a suit of light shining in the rain
In a suit of light
In a suit of light shining in the rain
In a suit of light
