

Reflections

Too Pure to Die

Sometimes it hurts me to think about why
I still show my face around
This place where I see are things that I disapprove of

But I can see some comfort in the fact that I will never be a part of all that shit and
My values will never change
And I can see some comfort in the fact there are still some
Who care enough to hear each and every one of these words
These words

These words could be
Enough to change your world if
You would just listen and think before shooting them down

Sometimes it hurts me to think about why
I still show my face around
This place where I see are things that I disapprove of

But I can see some comfort in the fact that
I will never be a part of all that shit and
My values will never change
And I can see some comfort in
the fact there are still some
Who care enough to hear each and every one of these words

What you dont know
Won't kill you
But your ignorance might

These words could be
Enough to change your world if
You would just listen and think
before shooting them down

Lyrics submitted by Brandon.

Lyrics provided by <https://damnyrics.com/>