

Signs

Michael W. Smith

You're weighed down with regret
You can't see the road ahead
Or the burden on your back It seems the trek will never end
The winding paths that still descend
And up above a sky washed black
You just can't bear to look at that Follow the signs
Open your eyes
Read between the lines of what you see
Look into the soul of reality Open your mind
Look at the signs
Never look back at yesterday
Keep your gaze steady on the narrow way Now you've found the sacred tree
You kneel upon the broken wheat
You watch your burden fall away And all the things that you once sought
Now are counted less than lost
For now you see the light of day
The signs were pointing all the way Follow the signs
Open your eyes
Read between the lines of what you see
Look into the soul of reality Open your mind
Look at the signs
Never look back at yesterday
Keep your gaze steady on the narrow way Follow the signs
Follow the signs Open your eyes
Look at the signs
Open your mind
Follow the signs Follow the signs
Open your eyes
Read between the lines of what you see
Look into the soul of reality Open your mind
Look at the signs
Never look back at yesterday
Keep your gaze steady on the narrow way Open your eyes
Look at the signs
Open your mind
Follow the signs Open your eyes
Look at the signs
Open your mind
Follow the signs
