                          (Blaow) A'yo I'm dancin' on the edge of insanity
                              And rhymin' like its the end of humanity
                    Still people from the old neighborhood can't stand to see me
         Turn around and tell girls we like family What up with all that, jokin', and collamity
                         Behind the laughter they thinkin about jammin' me
                            But they don't know, I got somethin' for them
But I ain't with that negative vibe, so fuck all that I've earned alot from this game, and sacrificed more
                           Stand here a new man, but I'm still the old boy
                           They claimin' they sell but I'm still the old boss
Sometimes wings get clipped, we all hit the floorBut today though, its Black Thought, Kweli and Raw
                            You can be sure that we got our eyes on y'all
