Ragged Rain Life

Duncan Browne

A taste of wine and a bedroom full of ashes and a swell of rain
across the morning

I turned to the child of falling light
And I knew that I lay entangled in her ragged life

Hiding her wild eyes beneath her long lashes She said "I see you still fall in love with faces"

And I laughed at the child of falling light Though I knew
that she was right
I was a stranger
in her ragged life

I am never safe
from her sad
way of laughing
I tried to move
but my head
was full of memories

And the rain
was still dancing
and the wind
swept the darkness in
As I turned away
from her ragged life

Lyrics Submitted by Richard Gagnon

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/