

Metropolis

Wintersleep

A full-grown man, man casually dressed caught a thought in a plan in a busy metropolis four tarot cards held tightly to his chest as if to protect as if his life depended on this way it works someone more adventurous some other place some other place that I forget as if the world has ever stopped and noticed something so pure some comical, so tragic these two little girls girls in rhythm more or less caught up in a twirl and miscellaneous but love is a call don't have to be invited a climb through walls as if never existed The man that you are The man you were
The man you left Turn into stars flowing, through the wilderness Burning hard, a memory you can't forget Wherever you are, why'd you ever reveal it I know who you are I know the secrets you protect Alone in your car, the violence you imagine It hurts so hard, a memory you can't forget Wherever you are, why you ever concede it As if it was regards ever care and if it did But nothing un-pure is ever complicated
But nothing is ever done, is ever done it's said by chance
But nothing I'm sure has ever resonated
But

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnllyrics.com/>