Dancing Dirt Into The Snow

Missy Higgins

Alone you find yourself just hanging
And to fill the hole you cling to all that seems
To hide the little girl that crying
Underneath the rage that you let others see'Cause you're dancing dirt into the snow
While others look at you on show
You're dancing dirt into the snow
While all around you people grow
And watch you bleed, and watch you bleedSo now you look at me, eyes wooden
An anchor through your head, crimson for disguise
An opal for a wound you carry
Fairy lights of pleading someone look at me'Cause you're dancing dirt into the snow
While others look at you on show
You're dancing dirt into the snow
While all around you people grow
And watch you bleed and watch you bleedThe more you push through broken glass, the thicker it becomes
And the more you turn on broken worlds, the sooner you will need
The more you push through broken glass, the thicker it becomes
And the more you turn on broken worlds, the sooner you will need, a gun'Cause you're dancing dirt into the snow
While others look at you on show
You're dancing dirt into the snow
While all around you people grow
