

As Soon As the Tide Comes In

Del Amitri

You'd better get some sleep for a change
Before tomorrow brings you down
By three o'clock they'll both be sitting on that plane
Hopelessly honeymoon bound And I hope no one asks you to kiss this bride
Or tie tin cans to the car
And if friends and relations mingle outside
You can linger at the bar So bring on the rainclouds and block out the moon
Let the action begin
'Cause it's as sure as sunrise and as sure as time
The bride will be changing and you will be crying
And it will be raining as soon as the tide comes in You'll feel like some soap opera star
Predictably hitting the booze
With your standard issue broken heart
You step into your Saturday shoes And you might feel better if you slapped her face
Or slipped some pills in his wine
But instead, some voice in your head keeps saying
You'll look back and laugh sometime So bring on the rainclouds and block out the moon
Let the action begin
'Cause it's as sure as sunrise and as sure as time
The bride will be changing and you will be crying
And it will be raining as soon as the tide comes in Yeah, it will be raining as soon as the tide comes in So put on your lipstick and check that your hat's straight too
'Cause if they can go through with it, you can do it too So bring on the rainclouds and block out the moon
Let the action begin
'Cause it's as sure as sunrise and as sure as time
The bride will be changing and you will be crying
And it will be raining as soon as the tide comes in Yeah, it will be raining as soon as the tide comes in
It will be raining as soon as the tide comes in
