

Who's Thinking About You Now?

Jason Mraz

Who's thinking about you now?
If you were building a wall, who would tear it all down and pull you through?
Who's thinking about you?
Who'd care enough to send you flowers, that you could call at all hours, and give your love to? Somebody must believe if they could see what I see
If they haven't, well they will, baby they all will Just when you suspect that life couldn't get no harder, something comes along and makes your dark day darker
The weight of it all falls on you Who will be the one to listen when it's time to listen?
Who will be the one to miss you when you go missing?
Well, I do. Do I qualify, qualify, qualify, qualify, qualify?
I want to be the one to help you ignore Mr. Loneliness leaning his head into your door.
I'm hoping you can feel me.
I'm hoping you can feel me in your chest, chest, yeah
I'm hoping that you notice how you're blessed. Yeah...I feel like starting something.
I feel like calling off today to be with you.
Yeah, I believe we're on to something. It' familiar like a deja vu, familiar like a deja vu
Yeah, and I know you're smokin', I've seen your fire.
I know in love, you've been giving it up. So do I qualify, qualify, qualify, qualify, qualify?
I want to be the one to help you move from Mr. Loneliness living in the kitchen of your home.
I'm hoping you can feel me.
I'm hoping that I don't run out of breath, breath, yeah. (Music Break) When our two hands are linked together with an ampersand, its my kind of diagram
When I saw her eyes, I lined up side by side, well I'm a happy man, yes I'm a happy man. Yes ma'am, yes ma'am, yes ma'am, I am thinking about you.
