

Be True to Your Woman

Brian McFadden

I was talking last night
To a friend who was thinking he might
Risk it all for a moment of lust
And adventure, so I told him You can live everyday like your last
Pay the price and the moment will pass
It's too late and there's no second chance
If it's over, you got nothing Well, I've been there
The grass was just fine on this side
Because I've been there
There's no getting back on that ride There's no replacing the love you got
You don't have to lose, to see what you've lost
Well, just be true to your woman No good living the lie
When it's over, the secret won't die
She'll move on to another guy
She won't love you like your wife And I've been there
I don't recommend the pain
Because I've been there
Trust me as your friend, there's nothing to gain There's no replacing the love you got
You don't have to lose, to see what you've lost
Oh, just be true to your woman Many years, working hard, everyone gets tempted
By something they never knew, never had
The fantasy overtakes, over-rides, everything
And you'll get lost in a hollow world All those years, they are worth the lot
You only realize when they've gone
Then just be true There's no replacing the love you got
You don't have to lose, to see what you've lost
Just be true to your woman
