

Temple of Flies

Fractured Fairytales

Release us today, Liquefy our eyes, Sacrifice us to the gods, you already did it once
Release us today, liquefy our eyes, Sacrifice us to the gods, you already did it once.

Seeing nothing, feeling nothing, not existing time for you
Flies are born in your name, their young are sons of your flesh
Seeing nothing, feeling nothing, not existing time for you

Their children grow together inside you.
A congregation of families all taking a piece of their god.

I guess they fly away with your dreams, memories and your soul.
Now all that's left is some bones, maggot shit and your skull.

After all the religion, self bettering and sacrifice, at the last moment you realize you never knew the meaning of life.

Now your body is their temple, Their breeding grounds and their god.

The population of your vessel was once one, now it one million.

You are where they are saved. You are where they are born. Baptised in your remains. You're the Temple of Flies
