

I Won't Take You for Granted

Greg Long

Took the rail ride home and I sat next to a wealthy man, he'd shown me all the fortunes he made, in New York, London and Japan, and when he found out I had studied in theology, it triggered something deep inside he opened up his heart to me, and it made me sad what he'd been through and it made me glad that I know you

I'm living in the promises you made to me, you've given me everything, strength to believe,
your mind liberal, you've opened my eyes, so I won't, no I won't, take you for granted and as we parted I realized that money isn't everything but this guy had a lot of it still it was obvious there was something missing it helped me to figure out that being a part of your family something I've got used to cause it seems you've always been with me but I love you more than when we first met and I wanna be sure that I don't forget

you've given me everything, strength to believe,
your mind liberal, you've opened my eyes,
so I won't, no I won't, take you for granted

keep me in this place, where all the air I breath is flowing straight from heaven, giving life to me and as I feel your touch, I'm filled with gratitude I wanna live each day closer to you and I love you more than when we first met

and I wanna be sure that I don't forget

you've given me everything, strength to believe,
your mind liberal, you've opened my eyes, so I won't, no I won't, no I won't, no I won't take you for granted
