Buried

Alkaline Trio

I'm awake, it was a half bad dream
That was way too long, my whole life it seemed
That someone started digging me up
Turned my headstone into dustThe sun was swallowed by the trees

The night was here for good

You pulled my hand and my head up You put oxygen into my bloodYou walked me through the gates

Like we were visitors for the day

You laid me down in the back seat

And you drove till I woke up to hear you sayYou never lie but it's no fun to tell the truth I guess, I never loved but I will see what I can do

Got so much life to waste

That I would take my days and hand them to youI'm awake, it was a half bad dream

That was way too long, my whole life it seemed

That someone started digging me up

Turned my headstone into dustI know you never lie but it's no fun to tell the truth I guess, I never loved but I will see what I can do

Got so much life to waste

That I would take my days and hand them to youI know you never lie but its so hard to tell the truth I guess, I never loved but I will see what I can do

Got so much life to waste

That I would take my days and hand them to you, to you
