Song in CM

Kathryn Calder

The beauty of my better half
I see it clearly looking back
You could never be mine
No you'll never be mine, loveWe fight the fights that leave us soft
And feel the sharpness of the rocks
You could never be mine
No you'll never be mine, loveAnd when the pressure bears its weight
You let me rest my weary bones
And when the emptiness won't take
You let me rest with you alone
And if we fall, then we fallSometimes I know just how I feel
Sometimes I know I have no idea
You could never be mine
No you'll never be mine, loveIf in the slight forgotten bend
The well of ink's run out by then Oh well, never you mind, because we're coming on high tideAnd when the pressure bears its weight
You let me rest my weary bones
And when the emptiness won't take
You let me rest with you alone
And if we fall, then we fallAll our lives, all our lives
You could never be mine
No you'll never be mine, loveAnd when the pressure bears its weight
You let me rest my weary bones
And when the emptiness won't take
You let me rest with you alone
And if we fall, then we fall
And if we fall, then we fall
And if we fall, then we fall
