

Seven Hours

Little May

You said I'm all you ever needed but you don't want me all the time Imagined us living by a river, I was your shotgun bride James was telling secrets and you held my fingers as you drive me away Tie me up again, pry me awayYou said she's all you ever needed we're just strangers, we've cut the bindings

    Need you to give me back my lungs so my body can forgive me slow

    And I can fight this with my hands but my head won't let me

You're still hereI know that you've seen all the ways that my body can talk But I never heard it like, I never heard it like thatSilent heart, feel your hands before the night I'm seven hours north

The binds are tied as we bide our time againYou said she's all you ever needed we're just strangers, we've cut the bindings

    Need you to give me back my lungs so my body can forgive me slow

    And I can fight this with my hands but my head won't let me

You're still hereI know that you've seen all the ways that my body can talk But I never heard it like, I never heard it like thatShow less
