

Window Song

Britonica

All the windows are playing their games
Well, I won't see outside again
Until I ride all the fog away
I'm putting words in their place Between me and the window's pane
From my inarticulate brain it brings
But all of the fog is erased
When I write all the words that I never say, I never say
I never say, I never say to you Now the impose won't go away
Distracted by something it says
'Cause you don't see anything
It's just between windows and me
Wait till it rains again and I write all the words that I never say, I never say
I never say, I never say to you Will you try to release lies, focus hard and give it time?
Who you are a nimble life, religious water washes Now the dirt on the window is showing
I should have drawn something instead
The dirt on the window is showing
I should never have written my name The dirt on the window is showing
I should have drawn something instead
The dirt on the window is showing
I should never have written what I never say, I never say
I never say, I never say to you
