

There Never Was a Train

Clint Black

Given up on traveling'
It's driving me insane
Riding alone on a midnight train Now a mind can wonder and that's far from being free
'Cause when that lonesome sunset whistle blows
This is where I'll be I hopped a westbound for San Antone
From there to Santa Fe
And It's a thousand miles from there to home
And there's a thousand things to say About a man bound to ramble
And a dream he's got to lose
That'll break this fever set him free
And bring him home to you Somewhere I slipped off track
But the world keeps going by
But there never was a train
That couldn't try There'll be nobody waiting
My goodbyes are too long gone
From that moment at the station
When I left from right to wrong But now I finally nearly made it
It was a long uphill climb
To right back to where I started from
But I think I can this time Somewhere I slipped off track
But the world keeps going by
But there never was a train
That couldn't try Somewhere I slipped off track
I was thinking I could fly
But there never was a train
That couldn't try
