

Achilles

The Nova Echo

a cell shade over thin wire frame a looking glass view with a faint blue light dividing the subtle tones of your delicate smile we're only gonna have just a short while left in the sky never enough to give in to the sun it's lonely in a way that you can't design lonely in a way that you can't see you are the one like a prodigal son it's only in a way that you feel inside only in a way that you feel after several hours out in space it starts to settle in with this universal disconnection you work for me like anti gravity but that's one in a thousand things I will never tell you
