

Suitcases

Super Deluxe

Suitcases in an empty room filled with the confusion and hopelessness that trouble you within the gardens of your mind wandering the silent places the only refuge you could ever find in the darkness by the door
you were left alone
to the madness you called home
the only one you've known where your innocence was gone and your strength to carry on (yeah) losing the discipline for life you could not fake it once and you would never threaten twice
you were left alone
to the madness you called home
and your strength to carry on (carry on, yeah) I know how you feel questioning your worth you'd do anything to be lifted from the earth in the darkness by the door
you were left alone
and your strength to carry on
