

Velvet Sounds

Holly Williams

Velvet sounds you made
Sleeping symphony as I would lie awake
In the crevice of your shoulder soft and warm
That's where I miss your breathing
Black and pink and white
These are colors that remind me of the night
We fell on your steps and wished for all our lives
To be filled with such freedom
Picture perfect place
Painting shadows on the canvas of your face
Graceful rhythms in the frantic love we made
Moving underneath moonlight
Now, looking at my mirror
The one you gave to me
From the shop across the street

Where everything is rare
Just like your blue eyes
Just like your sad goodbyes
Just like the heartfelt letter
That your mother mailed to you
Everything made me cry
So here they come again
Haunting memories of you they always win
Begging for a place to come alive again
I swear I will not hurt you again
Velvet sounds you made
Sleeping symphony as I would lie awake
In the crevice of your shoulder soft and warm
That's where I miss your breathing
