Hammerheart (Remastered)

Bathory

Now that the wind called my name
And my star had faded now hardly a glimpse up in the empty space
And the wise one-eyed great father in the sky stilled my flameFor the ones who stood me near
And you few who were me dear
I ask of thee to have no doubts and no fearsFor when the great clouds fills the air
And the thunder roars from o, so far away up in the sky
Then for sure you will know that I have reached the joyous hall up highWith my bloodbrothers at side
All sons of father with one eye
We were all born in the land of the blood on iceAnd now you all who might hear my song
Brought to you by the northern wind have no fear
Though the night may seem so everlasting and forever darkThere will come a golden dawn
At ends of nights for all yee on whom Upon the northstar always shinesThe vast gates to hall up high Shall stand open wide and welcome you with all its within
And Oden shall hail us bearers of a pounding hammerheart
