Nothing

Nikka Costa

It's late in the evening You're breathing with someone else You come home to call meAnd I ask you "What you've been doing with yourself?" And you say nothing at all You say nothing at all Your flight is longer than usual And your conscience ain't no company, oh no I'm there smiling and warmOoh, I missed you so And can't wait to show you how I feel But you feel nothing at all You feel nothing at allThere we were Never strangers before There was a light that shined on us But now there's nothing at allOho, oh, you should've taken a look around Before you laid that woman down, yeah, yeah You better get a hold of yourself

You better get a hold of yourself
'Cause there's a woman here
Who's willing to tryWeeks go by
And your mind seems preoccupied

I felt a piece missing hereBut when I ask you about what's going on?

You say, "It's all me my dear" So I thought nothing of it all

I thought nothing at allOho, oh, you should've taken a look around Oh, before you laid that woman down, yeah, yeah

You better get a hold of yourself 'Cause there's a man in you about to die With nothing, with nothing
