Falling Down

Unwritten Law

I watch the sun as it deceased amidst the desert sky
I break the lies before they die inside the public eye
The enemy of human life protects the youth and children
For without them there is no air to breathe
You'll soon forget about the differences that come between us
And until then I will be, falling down
I stop to ask a question no one wants to wonder why
I guess they're so content they have enough to get them by

It seems that time has given life another chance tomorrow
The sounds we bring are for the world to sing
If you believe what lies ahead is only in the future
Who stays unseen you can't see, falling down
The enemy of human life protects the youth and children
For without them there is no air to breathe
You'll soon forget about the differences that come between us
And until then I will be, falling down
