

Have a Little Faith

Richard Marx

You were just an innocent soul
When the darkness came and stole your light away
How can you be anything but still
When the warmth of tomorrow's
Buried in the chills of yesterday
Dive into the deep, find it in you to believe
In a place your wounded heart has never known
If you dare reach for me I won't let you fall alone Have a little faith
Have a little hope
Have a little trust
In the great unknown Love's been a razor deep in your chest
Made you feel like your runnin'
Out of breathe in slow quicksand
It's no kind of life being locked down tight
A heart like a flower needs a little light and a gentle hand
Let suspicion come to rest, cast away the loneliness
That you have carried so long
Wrap your arms around this moment
Now, before it's gone Let the memories go blind and release your mind
From the ghost that's inside of you
How can I get you to see baby, you could never be Too lost for me to find you Just have a little faith
Just a little, faith You and I can be ones who believe
In a love that lingers eternally
You and I could stay ever this way
In a love that lingers eternally
