Forget Your Heart

Silverstein

Fight these eyes
They're drawing you insideSign the name in marker
Watch the clouds as they got darker
Felt it start to slip awayAll the schemes were made and plotted
All the rules have been forgotten now
I made it by the skin of my teeth again this timeI'm waiting, still waiting
To get away and make a change
Seasons last forever in this phaseForget your heart
It's weighing you down inside
As you confide your life to someone elseMaybe we're scared to be alone
We're not prepared to throw the stones
To watch them drift out of our controlI braced my body for the sudden impact
That was more than I
Ever thought that it would beAnd when it knocked me over
I've never felt more stiff than sober now
I'm struggling to get up and run awayI'm wasting, I'm wasting
My life away, I've got to change
I've gotta burn the book and turn the pageForget your heart
It's weighing you down inside
As you confide your life to someone elseMaybe we're scared to be alone
We're not prepared to throw the stones
To watch them drift out of our controlThere's no return
To what you had when you started
Before you lost control, you will never recoverFight these eyes
They're drawing you insideLay down and pretend you're dead
Lay down before you lose control
Lay down and pretend you're dead
Lay down before you lose controlForget your heart
It's weighing you down inside
As you confide your life to someone elseMaybe we're scared to be alone
We're not prepared to throw the stones
To watch them drift out of our control

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/