Love Is Everything

Jane Siberry

Maybe it was to learn how to love
Maybe it was to learn how to leave
Maybe it was for the games we playedMaybe it was to learn how to choose
Maybe it was to learn how to lose
Or maybe it was for the love we madeOh, love is everything they said it would be
And love made sweet and sad the same
But love forgot to make me too blind to see
You're chickening out, aren't you?You're bangin' on the beach like an old tin drum
I can't wait 'til you make the whole kingdom come
So I'm leavingMaybe it was to learn how to fight
Maybe it was for the lesson in pride
Maybe it was for the cowboys' waysOr maybe it was to learn not to lie
Or maybe it was to learn how to cry
Or maybe it was for the love we madeOh, love is everything they said it would be
And love did not hold back the reins
But love forgot to make me too blind to see
You're chickening out, aren't you?You're bangin' on the beach like an old tin drum
I can't wait 'til you make the whole kingdom come
So I'm leavingFirst he turns to you, then he turns to her
So you try to hurt him back
But it breaks your body down
So you try to love bigger, bigger still
But it, it's too lateSo take a lesson from the strangeness you feel
And know you'll never be the same
And find it in your heart to kneel down and say
I gave my love, didn't I?And I gave it big sometimes
And I gave it in my own sweet time
I am just leaving
I am just leavingLove is everything
Love is everything
Love is everything
Love is everything
Love is everything
Love is everything
