In Flames

I cannot frame, that's why I lose control

I aim, I stumble and I fall

Our adaptation can't be faithful

Your world does not attract meThis is the end, you see

There's no more truth in me

As if you would deserve it

You are my enemyI can't ignore the way you make me bleed

I hate when you throw my thoughts against the wall

Got to wake up and make a stand

The desperation forces another mistakeI count again, I know who to blame

My life in vain, who said I was sane?

I count again, I know who to blame

My life in vain, who said I was sane? Follow your instinct, it usually takes you home

Don't let these words tear you down, down

You see me hanging by the end of the rope

I tell youSlow, I go and the wait seems to be over

All that I know is that my life

Has become such a waste for youI blame and run, sadly all too often

I dive into the day without your sympathy

I tend to try but lack the focus

Becoming a distant memoryWhat once was, is quickly forgotten

All wrapped up inside

Delete all resemblance

I feel your reliefSlow, I go and the wait seems to be over

All that I know is that my life

Has become such a waste for youFollow your instinct, it usually takes you homeSlow, I go and the wait seems to be over

All that I know is that my life

Has become such a waste for youSlow, I go and the wait seems to be over

All that I know is that my life

Has become such a waste for you
