Two Cents

Davis

So you wanna come and text my phone
Telling me shit that I heard before
Too bad I wasn't listening
So there really ain't sense in putting your two cents in

Oh tell me something I don't know
Your news is older than a dinosaur
You had your day now you extinct man
So there really ain't sense in putting your two cents in

So you wanna come and bother me
With some shit talk all about my history you should stop before you even begin
Cause there really ain't sense in putting your two cents in

Ya'll run your mouth like a marathon
Louder than a car alarm
You should bit your tongue before you la your lip
Cause there really ain't sense in putting your two cents in

We've heard it all before
Tell us something we don't know
So you got an opinion?
But there really ain't sense when you're one of a million
You sound like an internet troll
Hiding behind your cell phone
Behind your back everyone's whispering
"There really ain't sense in putting your two cents in"

Oh when I look at the computer screen
Everybody online is always arguing
They go back and forth but they don't understand
It's a 140 character wasteland

Oh this man comes on the TV
Selling some new technology
I can't get no satisfaction
And man you're just another distraction

We've heard it all before

Tell us something we don't know
So you got an opinion?
But there really ain't sense when you're one of a million
You sound like an internet troll
Hiding behind your cell phone
Behind your back everyone's whispering
"There really ain't sense in putting your two cents in"

We've heard it all before
Tell us something we don't know
So you got an opinion?
But there really ain't sense when you're one of a million
You sound like an internet troll
Hiding behind your cell phone
Why do I bother explaining?
When there really ain't sense in putting my two cents in

Lyrics Submitted by Ivan

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/