

Beaches

Tokyo Police Club

All together now,
Just a shadow in an open door way.
Turn it around, turn away,
I used to write your name across beaches.
I'll fall apart and hit the ground,
Are you there? I am waiting at the top of the stairs,
You can find me in the dead of the night.
I am waiting for a knock on the door,
You can call on me to say you were right.
You're right, I wish-I wish I never had of told you I lied,
Are you gone, are you there or are you just out of sight? Happens all the time,
Two sides of an endless story.
The story is mine, tell me baby.
People write their names across beaches,
Feeling out into the tide.
Are you there? I am waiting at the top of the stairs,
You can find me in the dead of the night.
I am waiting for a knock on the door,
You can call on me to say you were right.
You're right, I wish-I wish I never had of told you I lied,
Are you gone, are you there or are you just out of sight? Open the window,
Passenger side.
Holding your hands out,
Out of your mind. I am waiting at the top of the stairs,
You can find me in the dead of the night.
I am waiting for a knock on the door,
Come and call on me to say you were right.
I wish-I wish I had of told you I lied,
Are you gone, are you there or are you just out of sight?
