The Waiting Game

Squeeze

I heard the stomping of feet dancing On the wooden floor upstairs I wasn't in the mood for laughing So I sat silent in my chairThere was someone missing I knew Outside there fell the rain Where had she gone, what could I do I played the waiting gameThe cigarette smoke was annoying My mood was fit for a bath A drink couldn't oil my expression Nothing could make me laughI was worried out of my head I was in such a state What's keeping her, where has she gone I played the waiting gameWhen you love someone You worry when they're late When you love someone You know the time it takes To play the waiting gameThe music got louder and louder From the wooden floor upstairs I played with a handful of peanuts When I saw her standing thereMy mood leapt right out of the bath She had got stuck in the rain Her coat dripped on a hanger Playing the waiting I couldn't understand her Playing the waiting Seemed like I'd wait forever
