Burning Heads

In the first time when everything was fine
Life was shining every time
Something disappeared she lost the spice
There's no colour now, just dark cold ice
She's watching the days go by
But none of them feels like home
Once she would wake up and scream
Now she got used to it
There's noone in this world
And everyday it's just the sameShe hid behind depression
Hid from the revelation
That her life ain't worth living
Her life is nothingShe's the etrenal witness of her own living dream
She can't find no reason to live or to believe
And she's looking for her savior
Someone to rely on
The kind of cool guy who won't kick her in the assShe's living
She's gone to catch this train
