

It Doesn't Really Matter

Skytone

It doesn't really matter that I loved you
How many reasons call
It doesn't really matter at allIt doesn't matter that I failed to Break down your father's wall
It doesn't really matter at allWhy tell me, you don't understand when you do
I thought, I had something to sayBut it doesn't really matter at allI changed my name
To be rid of the things that I want from you it's strange but a name is a name and the truth is the truthOh, there is always Always someone there to remind meSo I learn to live with shame Tell myself, I feel no pain but I do and if I have to tell youThen it really doesn't matter at allLove in your hands Promises, promisesAnd it's no good looking back Because time's thief and I believe that I'm too old for that
We're just saying the things that we have said foreverIt doesn't really matter that I loved you
How many seasons fall
It's too bad
It really doesn't matter at all
