When You're Older

Kate Earl

Red eyes fly away from here every night
My intentions aren't unfair or unkind
How else could I purge my heart of this pillowed dream?
Arctic wind will be washed from my hair
Trading the forest for the cityThings will be different for you
Things will be different for youWhen you're older, you'll look back
As you grow, you'll understand
Why I leftAll I talk about is you since that day
Remember when I'd cry into my soup
And you would say that it's okaySo many things used to break my heart
I'd fall so easily
But you're younger and smarter
And harder than meThings will be different for you
Things will be different for youWhen you're older, you'll look back
As you grow, you'll understand
Why I leftI'm not comfortable in my own skin
Haven't found my finest hour
I can't dance, let alone sing before a crowdOr write effortlessly
What I can't come out and say
When I do, I'll be just like youTrading the forest for the city
Finding my way down the mountain
Finding my way to the sea[Incomprehensible]When you're older, you'll look back
As you grow, you'll understand
Why I left, you'll understand
You'll understand
