

A Thousand Rivers

Dismal Euphony

Thousands of years have passed
Still we do not know O tell me, please, tell me what lies beyond our comprehension
We are nothing but autumn leaves swirling in the circles of time Haunted by the shadow of our past Time won't sweep away our deepest scars of memories
It will carry them along eternity
Betrayed by the enigma of existence
Yet, we admire this insignificance
O shameful, pathetic
Listen carefully:
To the sound of an evening breeze
And the sound of a thousand rivers struggling towards the sea
But all is so dead and silent
Well, this way it's got to be
