

Crestfallen

Split Lip

Who am I to need you when I'm down?

Where are you

When I need you around?

Your life is not your own

And all I ask you

Is for another chance

Another way around you

To live by circumstance, once again

Who am I to need you now

To ask you why, to tell you no

To deserve your love and sympathy?

You were never meant to belong to me

And you may go

But I know you won't leave

Too many years built into memories

Your life is not your own

Who am I to need you now

To ask you why, to tell you no

To deserve your love and sympathy?

You were never meant to belong to me

Who am I to you?

Along the way

I lost my faith

And as you were, you'll be again

To mold like clay, to break like dirt

To tear me out in your sympathy

You were never meant to belong to me

You were never meant to belong to me

You were never meant to belong to me

Who am I?

Who am I?

Who am I?
