The Tower

Nicole Atkins

We built a tower for all the town to see
Bricks, concrete, metal and memories
Inside the rocks and stone, spaces became our home
Arguments echoing, love made me so highSearching for words for the end
But we built the tower too highWhen the light finally dies and we look to the sky

Will we finally know why
The call the dawn the morning
And I'd wish we'd said goodbye

Years flying by, trapped all alone in the sky

And you stories down and all our loved ones outside

Our words turned out all wrong

Intentions lost in halls

Now all I want to do is tear down the wallsSearching for words for the end But we built the tower too high

When the light finally dies and we look to the sky

Will we finally know why

The call the dawn the morning

And I wish we'd said goodbyeSeems like the final day you'll ever come my way

So please forgive me if I hold on too tight, too tight

Tight, tight, tight

There's a tower, there's a tower

There's a tower, crumbling

Crumbling, crumbling, downSo when the light finally dies

I'll know the answer to why

They call the dawn, mourning

Wish I could've told you goodbye.
