

Electric Heart

Devendra Banhart

The electric heart shines for you
It's given up sparks
But that's nothing newThe electric heart
Spins its lightning web
The spider sparkle lights the way aheadI eat the biscuits, a gift for her
I eat the fishes, they got no furThe open road
Oh, God's final town
I'll take a little sip from its high dripThe earth hurts sky say your name
The earth was dry until you cameA little baby begins to grow
A happy belly begins to glowThe electric sky combing in the snow
He's always high
He's a gentle soulMy winter friends with Christmas legs
And cold, cold beards
And frozen headsWe keep them shiny
We keep them shone
'Cuz though they're tiny, they're valuableI've lost my nails but that's nothing new
And goddamn thumbs
Thumbs, goddamn youAnd if all else fails as all else do
There's someone else
For sure will take my placeNow flung from dreams your voice reappears
And it almost sings like you're almost here
Singing an ancient chant, spreads his dusty lensAnd I'm coming in in my head
Electric heart sang for us
Shining love
