

The Keeper of the Keys

Chris de Burgh

I hear her voice
She calls to me
I know she's near me
But I cannot see
Through prison walls
That come between
Her dreams of freedom and the real world
Where her face is never seen
All the king's horses and all his men
Are fearful of the power that can come from book and pen
And all the changes there that can be found
And far away I hear a distant sound
It's rolling like thunder
Oh, shout it from the highest window
Break down every door
And tell them you won't take it anymore
Show that you will never spend a lifetime on your knees
Rise up and catch the Keeper of the Keys
Oh, what ancient words can hold her here
But she's never heard
By men who claim the higher ground
It was always there for them to have and hold
Where woman's never found
All of the holy men who are at her door
Are frightened that their power will be lost forevermore
If she believes her freedom's on the way
And still it's getting louder every day
The sound of thunder
Oh, shout it from the highest window
Break down every door
And tell them you won't take it anymore
Show that you will never spend a lifetime on your knees
Rise up and catch the Keeper of the Keys, rise up!
Tell them you will never spend a lifetime on your knees
And when you catch and kill the Keeper of the Keys
You will be free!
You will be free!
You will be free!
You will be free...
