Heartbeat

David Cook

I've seen the sun disappear before my eyes
Just above the highest tide, the falling to the ocean line.
And all, I see is smoke, enough to make me choke, the world feels broken down....
Counting the lines, the years are screaming louder now
And all the trees start falling down
The brightest lights are burning outSo I, will run through fire to reach the other side, and turn this life around...And when the moment's dead and gone
With every star I'm wishing on
With every right and every wrong
The lonely nights that take us on
For all the stones I've ever thrown Another break against the bone
Close my eyes I'm not alone
Let the heartbeat take me home
...
If there is love, rain it down on everyone
We could break away and run
Like we did when we were youngAnd we, could make believe
This is all we need
To live for only here and now
So when the moment's dead and gone
With every star we're wishing on
With every right and every wrong
The endeless night we sang alone for all the stone we've ever thrown we can save this broken bones close our eyes, we're not alone
Let the heartbeat takes us home
Let the heartbeat takes us home
