I Once Was An Honest Guy

Adam Douglas

There's only one way to fall behind, abuse my love a thousand times
And I've been learning a thing or two, like when to refuse a point of view

I drain the river dry,
and I once was an honest guys,
but now I've told a lie
I've told a lie

I've never been one to condecend, but i'll be here until the end
The worst part of a love that's lost, both you and I must pay the cost

I drain the river dry,
and I once was an honest guys,
but now I've told a lie

Maybe I'll be,
Much better off than before

And I've heard both things of what you say, like yes and no and maybe someday
I've thought about it once or twice, but now I've payed the highest price

I drain the river dry,
And I can't look you in the eye cuz I once was an honest guys,
but now I've told a lie

Maybe I'll be,
Much better off knowing that all I see
Is just a stepping stone
And I might be on my own

(Maybe I'll be,
Much better off than before)
