Deep Talk In The Shallow End

Ben Lee

If you were here, I'd slap you senseless Then I'd ask you where you've been I'd tell you, "Don't you know I worry Sitting up each night in fear"And then, I'd tell you that I'm angry And I'd say you did me wrong And that I hate you 'cos you sneak into My every single songIf you were here You'd see the damage done And then you'd feel the shame I'd make you understand my painIf you were 'round I'd show you wounds and scars The proof that you were here And then I'd make you cry like I did If my point still was not clearIf you were here, I'd scream and Maybe trash the room if I had time And then one single word would break your spirit Just the same as you broke mineIf you were here, you'd realize what you did Stay for a million years, I'd make you cry my tears But you're not here and I'm not strong And this whole thing has gone on too longI need to leave this on my shelf But instead I say it to myself If you were here I'd slap you senseless If only you were here
