

Fall To You

FFH

Trying to find a peace in all the wrong places
Wanting to find release from the empty spaces
So I pack my bags and I set out
Following traces of a better day So I walk a thousand miles in the wrong direction
Building callous on my feet and a fine collection
Of wasted days and foolish ways
And baggage that I've picked up along the way Then I hear a familiar voice calling me home
It's loves voice so I make the choice
To turn and follow And I fall to You and You see through
All the foolish games I play and I cast my cares away
And I fall to You, 'cause I know You'll do the same thing today
That You did every other day when I went away Trying to find the way with my own eye
Is like trying to find the sun in a midnight sky
And the more I carry on alone
The harder it is to get by on my own Then I see you standing there calling me home
So I throw down all my bags
And run straight to your arms And I fall to You and You see through
All the foolish games I play and I cast my cares away
And I fall to You, 'cause I know You'll do the same thing today
That You did every other day when I went away And now you've got me standing
On the edge of the ledge
You gently remind me of those words you said
And I fall, I fall, I fall And I fall to You and You see through
All the foolish games I play and I cast my cares, my cares, my cares away
And I fall to You, 'cause I know You'll do the same thing today
That You did every other day when I went away
