Never Ender

More Than Life

we choose directions we draw the lines from which we choose the sides that keeps us honest that keeps us tight and aware of our actions so how can change without seeing commitment withouthaving faith in what we could radiate to make a difference it's not just you and i -our example sets a fire to break down the empowerment of men with unclear minds who never drew the line between what we know is wrong and right so say whencause i won't stop from pouring on what we do today will set in stone cause we're building things we've always known things we've never seen but that will change if we learn today and teach tomorrow we all have to decide what we use to make the lines i'll let the truth encircle me it's a never ending fight but what's true will never die and we can take the power like we gave it so teach me something i'm wide open i'll teach you something if you listen
