Garden

Chandler + Maria Letner

Take me back to the garden, the heart of your truth. Take me back to the garden, where I can be confused. Rid me of my own idea of what the future holds. Remind me of your glory and the love Iâ€™ve always known. Remind me of the garden, the place I knew you most. The place where fire burns I need a furnace burning deep inside of me. So here I am, once again. Here upon the altar on my face I need the garden once again. Take me back to the garden I once walked with you. Take me back to the garden, the place where I withdrew from you. Before my sin and self pursuits consume my mind and soul. These restless hearts and broken thoughts are all I seem to know. Remind me of the garden, the palace I knew you most. The place where fire burns I need a furnace burning deep inside of me. So here I am, once again. Here upon the altar on my face I need the garden once again. Iâ€™ve chased the world, Iâ€™ve searched for praise, but it couldnâ€™t fill my soul. With a selfish path, fo wouldâ€™ve faced, forsaking what Iâ€™ve known. Iâ€™ve made mistakes, Iâ€™ve lost my way, but you show me g restore my faith. Youâ€™ve led me to the garden, where Iâ€™ve been found in you. Youâ€™ve shown me of your l again. You took my sin and met me where I am. You forgive me, Iâ€™ve been set free. Youâ€™ve claimed me as the one that youâ€™d go running after time and time again.
