

It's Not Enough

Attica Blues

Opens her eyes,
Doubting she slept at all,
Waiting for him,
Wanting the call
It's getting late,
And she's tired of it
Where could he be?
Who could he be with?
She doesn't trust,
But she still needs him
One thing is known - that she can't let go
It's not enough to think that you're in love
It's not enough to need
It's not enough just to be
You have to show that it's real
He feels the same - still thinks nothing's changed
She'll always be there,
No one is to blame
She's the only one, but something's wrong here
Disturbing silence starting to creep in
It's passing by them,
The friendship's wearing thin
Long as love survives it's alright in his eyes
But it's not enough to think that you're in love
It's not enough to need
It's not enough just to be
You have to know what it means
They argue over what never bothered them before
Don't realize they're doing it anymore
Immune to pain,
Just let it wash away
It's not enough
